

Did you know?

Your food flavours your milk

Your diet during pregnancy influences the flavour of your amniotic fluid. Once your baby is born, the food you eat will also affect the taste of your milk. Experiencing lots of flavours through your milk can enhance your baby's enjoyment of different tastes later when you start introducing solids.²²

Breast milk mystery

Why do children who were breastfed as babies have better sight than those who weren't?

For a long time, scientists thought it was solely because of the DHA long-chain fatty acids found in breast milk,¹⁷⁴ but one major study from centres across the US, UK and Australia found breastfed children had better depth vision than those who were fed formula supplemented with DHA.¹⁷⁵ Yet again, it seems breast milk has additional benefits and properties we don't yet understand.
